January 30

ilyAIMY

For more than two decades, Baltimore's ilyAIMY (i love you And I Miss You) has played everywhere — bait shops to biker weeks to clothing-optional resorts — in every one of the lower forty-eight states. Similarly adventurous songwriters, the band features multiple lead singers, innovative acoustic guitar, and even beatboxing. Rapid-fire lyricism is softened with cello and lush harmonies for “a welcome jolt in folk” as likely to rock out as break into barbershop.

February 6

Liana Harron, piano

This recital celebrates America's two hundred and fiftieth birthday through a program that bridges two musical worlds close to Dr. Harron's heart. Anchoring the afternoon is Aaron Copland's iconic “Appalachian Spring,” whose luminous melodies capture the pioneering spirit and pastoral beauty of the American landscape. Alongside this cornerstone of American music, she will perform works from her native Georgia, weaving together the folk traditions and rich harmonies of the Caucasus with the open frontiers of the American West. This program is both a tribute to America's semiquincentennial and a personal journey connecting the music of her two homes.

February 13

Laura Vasilyeva, musicology

Even those who have never entered a classic Italian opera house are likely to have some familiarity with its iconic look and feel — its dark auditorium and red seats (now familiar to us from cinema architecture), the remarkable distance between its floor and ceiling. This architectural firm has been described as one of the most stable ever designed for musical performance, so successful that it was reproduced thousands of times in the 1800s alone and exists on five continents. What is it about this building design that gives it such appeal and staying power? This question will be tackled by Laura Vasilyeva, a researcher of nineteenth-century Italian opera who has extensively studied the spaces where such performances are staged.

February 20

Faculty recital

The professional musicians of the CCBC music faculty will present a diverse program of selections from classical to jazz, in solo and ensemble.

February 27

Improvisation workshop

Creating and performing music spontaneously might sound daunting, but it's incredibly rewarding! It's about thinking fast and collaborating with whatever happens in the moment to build something new. This workshop will address some of the introductory basics of musical improv for the CCBC community.

March 6

David Rybczynski, jazz quartet

Dave Rybczynski ('90) is a freelance saxophonist and woodwind doubler who performs with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, Young Victorian Theatre Company in Baltimore, Several Species: The Pink Floyd Experience, and musical theater pit orchestras, including a recent five-week run of “Guys and Dolls” at Shakespeare Theatre Company in Washington, D.C. After earning an associate degree in music at CCBC Essex, he completed his bachelor's and master's degrees in music at Towson University. He then spent two years touring internationally with the Glenn Miller Orchestra before establishing himself in the mid-Atlantic region as a freelancer in orchestras and improvisational music groups.

March 13

Victoria Zelefsky, gig workshop

Victoria Zelefsky serves as the Vice President of Marketing & Communications for the Anne Arundel Economic Development Corporation, where she leads communications, brand strategy, marketing, public and government relations, and major events that drive business growth and community revitalization across Anne Arundel County. A classically trained opera singer, she will lead a marketing and communications workshop for musicians.

March 20

The Magical Mystery Four

The Magical Mystery Four is an acclaimed Beatles tribute band based in the Baltimore/Washington area. Formed in 2017, each band member is an accomplished musician and vocalist that brings multiple talents to the band. Playing note-for-note renditions of The Beatles' songs, The Magical Mystery Four perform popular songs from The Beatles' catalog as well as many songs that are seldom performed live.

March 27

Pop student recital

Talented CCBC applied music students and ensembles will present a concert of popular, jazz and musical theater selections.

April 10

African American art song

Singers from the Vocal Studies department of the Peabody Institute of Johns Hopkins University will perform an array of art songs written by African American composers under the direction of Associate Professor Carl DuPont. The artists will present a curated recital integrating live performance with scholarly commentary that illuminates the intersection of race, gender, sexuality and class within each work's creation and reception history.

April 17

Classical student recital

CCBC Essex applied music students will offer a diverse program of vocal and instrumental classical music ranging from the Baroque to contemporary eras.

April 24

Jeff Stern, percussion

Jeff Stern will present a riveting program of recent works for marimba, vibraphone and electronics to CCBC. Whether polyrhythmically grooving alongside a distorted reflection of acoustic sound, playing chamber music with the echos of his notes in real time or simply using physical gestures as means of contextualizing synthesized audio effects, Jeff immerses, captivates and transports listeners into his distinctively intriguing environment. Come prepared to be opened up to the vast possibilities of what percussion can do—dance, sing, provoke, move, entrance and more.

May 1

Chamber Singers

The CCBC Chamber Singers, under the direction of Dr. Michelle Smith, will present a concert of songs inspired by the music of Disney.

May 8

Honors recital

Specially selected music students will perform and be honored along with CCBC faculty members at this festive final Music Forum of the season.
